Carol Strongman qualified as a solicitor in 1985. She was a partner in private practice and a sole practitioner.

She specialises in family matters relating to children, in both public and private law.

She was a member of the Law Society's Children Panel from 1998 to 2003 before transferring to the Bar.

During the five years prior to her transfer to the Bar, Carol worked almost wholly as a solicitor agent for local authorities in the West Midlands, representing them in care and freeing applications in the Family Proceedings, County and High Courts. Since her transfer to the Bar, Carol has continued to specialise in public law work, with the representation of local authorities accounting for much of her practice.
